

sitestosee

The NC Museum of History describes "Torpedo Junction" in an article published in Junior Historian <http://ncmuseumofhistory.org/workshops/WWII/Session5.htm#torpedo>

A lesson plan focused on North Carolina geography and the location of ships sunk by German U-boats during WWII. <http://www.ncmuseumofhistory.org/workshops/WWII/LessonOuterBanks.htm>

background

Germany attacks ships along eastern coast of US during WWII. <http://www.americainwwii.com/stories/sharks.htm>

The sites tell the history of Cape Lookout and Cape Hatteras lighthouses. One site describes submarine warfare during World War II as an "Atlantic Turkey Shoot." <http://www.lighthousefriends.com/light.asp?ID=354>
<http://www.lighthousefriends.com/light.asp?ID=356>

A brief history of Ocracoke includes a summary about submarine warfare off North Carolina's coast during WWI and WWII. <http://www.ecu.edu/maritime/Projects/OcracokeWebSite/history.htm>

This site refers to accounts of WWII by residents who remember putting shades on windows as Taffy and Gramp did. <http://www.insiders.com/outerbanks/main-history3.htm>

World War II